Dear Microsoft Team,

As an engineer with over four years of software development experience and two years of data analytics experience, I am thrilled to be applying to Microsoft for the technical consulting position.

To outline a few skills that are directly in-line with what you're looking for:

1) I was the primary communication liaison and team lead for a consulting project that University of Toronto undertook in collaboration with PWC. The team was tasked with exploring diversification of consulting firms from a pure-play service-based model to a hybrid of service and product-based model
2) Having managed over 500 students in my TA course, I am comfortable communicating effectively with large groups of people on technical topics.

Microsoft's is analogous to technology – does not matter which kind. Working for a company with the ideals set by Nadella, with the mindset of constantly learning and improving is something that reflects my own. While I might not match your requirements perfectly, I consider my biggest asset to be the fact that I am a self-starter. If I am lacking knowledge or skill in a topic, I will put in the work in my spare time to learn and this is evidence of my extracurricular activities.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions you might have.

Best regards,

Krutheeka Rajkumar
